Your recent letter to Mr. Pierre Salinger has been brought to Mr. Dallas' attention in connection with your interest in employment with this Agency.

As you know, your application has been thoroughly reviewed in the past and we have been unable to locate a position commensurate with your experience and employment requirements. Our staffing situation has not changed substantially since your file was last reviewed and, in terms of our general requirements for personnel, we have no basis for encouraging you to anticipate an opening directly related to your principal experience. For the most part, your application has been handled through correspondence and it is possible that it has failed to bring out some incidental but important qualification which would suggest other avenues of consideration for you.

In order that you, and we, can be satisfied that the matter has been thoroughly and conclusively considered, we are inviting you to visit our offices in Washington for interviews with appropriate officials. We shall reimburse you for your transportation and other expenses in accordance with the standard regulations pertaining to Government travel. Will you please call collect to [redacted] extension [redacted] to arrange a time convenient to you and to receive instructions concerning travel arrangements.

The sincerity of your interest with our organization has been evident in your letters and you may be sure that we share your desire to be sure that every possibility for your useful service with us has been explored. We look forward to seeing you.

Sincerely,

Mr. Dulles:

As you will recall, you were contacted by [redacted] last summer in [redacted] when you were there to brief the then Senator Kennedy. At that time [redacted] asked you regarding the possibility of obtaining agency employment. Then in December 1960, Pierre Salinger wrote you regarding [redacted] and the reply was in effect that we were unable to find a spot for him at that time.

I have talked to [redacted] in O/Personnel about this and she tells me that the only office in the Agency that could possibly use a man with [redacted] experience would be somewhere in Security. I have already sent copies of this to Personnel for preparation of a prompt reply for your signature.

For your information, I am attaching the 18 December letter from Mr. Salinger and copies of the 7 January and 3 February replies that were sent to him.
